Wing-It Has a Raunchy Holiday Show for You

SEATTLE, WA – It's nearly Christmas time again, and Uncle Mike's family loves retelling your favorite holiday memories and folktales. Too bad that Uncle Mike has a penchant for completely defiling everything he touches.

Wing-It Productions combats the X-mas season with Uncle Mike Ruins Christmas, a late-night offering that puts the Ho back in Holidays. Uncle Mike Ruins Christmas, the latest in a string of über successful late-night shows, will be performed every Saturday at Midnight:30, November 17th – December 22nd. Tickets are $8 for general admission, and only available at the Historic University Theater box office.

Uncle Mike Ruins Christmas begins as a typically cheery and annoying holiday show. The performers solicit favorite holiday anecdotes from the audience and begin to retell the stories.

And then Uncle Mike shows up and ruins everything.

The cast features Suave's Douglas Willott and Ian Schempp, as well as several other Jet City Improv company members. Uncle Mike is played by the irreverent Mike Murphy - a large, bearded, brash new addition to the Wing-It family.

"Mike Murphy is one of the most unintentionally and intentionally funny performers I've ever met," says director Douglas Willott. "When he sets out to ruin Christmas, he succeeds with off-the-wall hysterical (and depraved) results."

Uncle Mike Ruins Christmas is another late-night production from Wing-It. Performances are Saturdays at Midnight:30, November 17th – December 22nd. All shows are at the Historic University Theater (HUT) located at 5510 University Way NE. Tickets are $8 and only available at the HUT box office.

Wing-It Productions is a 501(c)3 non-profit organization dedicated to enlightening, educating and entertaining audiences of all ages by producing theatrical events which explore theater by utilizing its improvisational roots.
